

Duty of Candour Report

Health in Mind is a charity promoting positive mental health and wellbeing. Through our unique pathway of support, collaborations, campaigns and resources we build hope, resilience and understanding of mental health and wellbeing. Each year we support around 4000 adults. We employ 145 staff and involve over 100 volunteers in our work each year.

All health and social care services in Scotland have a duty of candour. This is a legal requirement which means that when things go wrong and mistakes happen, the people affected understand what has happened, receive an apology, and that organisations learn how to improve for the future. An important part of this duty is that we provide an annual report about the duty of candour in our services. This report describes how Health in Mind has implemented Duty of Candour throughout the period of 1 April 2023 to 31 March 2024.

We hope you find this report useful.

1. How many incidents happened to which the duty of candour applies?

In the last year, there have been no incidents to which the duty of candour applied.

2. Information about our policies and procedures

Health in Mind has a comprehensive policy framework which provides guidance to our staff covering the following areas:

- Organisational
- Services and Support Provision
- Human Resources

Our Duty of Candour Policy is reviewed on a regular basis and is available to all staff and staff working in Health in Mind have read and understood this policy.

Where something has happened that triggers the duty of candour, our staff report this to the Service Manager who has responsibility for ensuring that the duty of candour procedure is followed. The Service Manager takes immediate action to reduce risk of harm to the individual, records the incident and, if the service is regulated, reports as necessary to the Care Inspectorate. The Manager also ensures that those involved in the incident receive appropriate support throughout the process.

When an incident has happened, the Service Manager and staff set up a learning review. If the Service Manager is involved in the incident, this is led by health in Mind Executive. This allows everyone involved to review what happened and identify changes for the future.

All new staff learn about the duty of candour at their induction. We know that serious mistakes can be distressing for staff as well as people who use care and their families. In addition to line management support and supervision, we have employee assistance programme in place for our staff if they have been affected by a duty of candour incident. Where carers or other family members are affected by the duty of candour, we have arrangements in place to provide welfare support as necessary.
